EVESON GOWER, first captain to lord Howe, is to command the next con-fit of seven ships of the line and three frigates.

New. 28. In the treaty of peace now carrying on between Great-Britain and other beligerent powers, the former has taken care to stipulate for a provision for the unfortunate loyalists and refugees; it is generally understood that a very large tract of land, bordering upon Canada, is to be ceded to these unfortunate people, who are to remain under the protection of the British nation; and to have guaranteed to them, both oy congress and this country, such tracts of land at may be given to them. As soon as they are thus provided for, it is said that lord Shelburne intends to propose that they shall all remove from England, New-York, and other parts, to the country assigned to them; York, and other parts, to the country assigned to them; and that in order to enable them to plant and cultivate their lands, they shall receive annually, for five years, from Great Britain, 60,000l. the amount of the pretent American pension litt, which is then to ceale and determine.

Canada and Nova-Scotia are also stated as part of the empire, to continue under the dominion of England; but whether any other or what part of America shall be permitted to remain under the protection of the parent state, is not known; but this much is certain, that the greatest difficulties in the way of peace, arile not from America, but from India. The allies find us rom America, but from India. The allies find us afficiently humbled in the west; but our power is fail paramount in the east; it is the wish, as it is the interest of France to reduce it there; and having once effected her purpose on that the start, including including to heath the tword; to weaken, not to ruin the power of England, was the tole end that France could have in view on entering into a war; the end care antwered, hostilities would cease of course.

ence antwered, hostilities would cease of course.

It is said, that when the negociations between GreatBritain and France were first agitated, the court of Vertailles proposed a cessation of arms till the last day of February, which was resused by the court of Londen; the minister assigning for the cause of resusal, that Great-Britain had already determined upon ways that Great-Britain had already determined upon ways and means for raifing the supplies to answer the current year, which must be laid before the representatives of the people previous to Christmas. This had a proper effect at Versailles, and a courier was immediately dispatched to London with a reply, that a determination for peace or war should certainty be immediately entered upon; in consequence of which the parliament was proregued to the 5th of December.

article: "An express is just arrived here with dispatches from our ambassador at Paris, by which we are informed that a peace is near concluded on, which has given great pleasure to all people here: whatever the terms are is not known; but they appear to be pleasing to their high mightinesses; so that there is no doubt but the preliminaries are by this time settled by all the powers at war, as the affair was to be finally determined in a few ways.

It is strongly reported, that an answer has been rectived from the French court, requiring nine days longer to consider the ultimatum of our court, and that the parliament will in consequence be again pro-

One of the great objects in dispute in the affair of peace, is said to be with respect to the limits of Nova-scoia, which the French wish to have settled in such manner as to take from our dominion the province of dayne; from which province we principally procused timber for masts of shipping.

A private letter from Bourdeaux says, that the coners of privateers have received orders from Paris, to call in immediately their privateers, and that they do not commit any more hostilities on the English till further commit any more hostilities on the English till turther orders, which gives great joy to the people there, who conjecture that peace is nearly concluded on.

Nov. 29. An evening paper fays, the royal commiffication contituting lord Howe first lord of the admiralty, is now preparing, and expected to pass the great seal, in the course of the week.

Six thousand troops are ordered to be immediately got ready to be sent to the West-Indies, by the first convoy that will sail.

Nev. 30. It is reported, that the earl of Chelburne, is to be made an English earl, and that his grace of Leinster is to be made an English guke.

NEW-LON Fibruary 21.

We learn that the brig Delight, from this port, (late commanded by captain Samuel Johnson) which was carried into New-York, had been sent from thence to the Lucia, and that in the night, soon after her arrival. carried into New-York, had been sent from thence to at Lucia, and that in the night, soon after her arrival, William Wignal, of this town (who belonged to the brig when she sailed from this port, and who went in her from New-York) persuaded two or three of the hands to join him in running off with the vessel; this they accomplished after securing the other people on board, and got safe with her into Guadaleupe, where they sold her for 400 johanneses.

We likewise learn by the post, that on Monday last, the sheriff of Newbork county, with three others, went in pursuit of some British goods which they had intelligence of; and, on searching a gentleman's house in Newport, they found to the amount of $381. lawful meney, per apprisal.

PROVIDENCE, February 12. Last Sunday afternoon a packet-boat from Newport, bound for this place, having freight on board to a con-fiderable amount, was taken near the north end of Prudence, by a refugee boat from New-York. Intelli-gence being received of this affair at Newport, captain Nicholas Webster, with 17 volunteeers, embarked on board a small sloop, and went in pursuit of the enemy, who next morning perceiving her approach, and find-ing it into the second here. who next morning perceiving her approach, and inding it impossible to avoid her or gain the sound, defired the owner, Mr. Cahoon, to resume the command; the packet (towing the armed boat) was accordingly conducted to the south-ferry at Narraganset, when the resuges, eight in number, got on thore, and attempted to escape; five of them were however soon taken, and the others were secured next day. Great merit is due to captain Webster and his crew, as well as to the people on boatdanother small boat that put out from Newport. for the alacrity and exception with which they port, for the alacrity and expedition with which they pursued the refugee plunderers.

Thursday evening captain Daniel Aborn arrived here in 17 days from Grenada. He sailed in company with the ship Hero, captain Tresetheren, of Portsmouth, and parted with her on the 5th instant.

Captain Folger, in a brig from this port for Virginia, was lately captured by an enemy's cruiter, and retaken by the General Greene privateer, of Newport. The brig, in attempting to come into Rhode Island in a fog, was cast away at Point Judith on Wednesday last.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.

Extrad of a letter from Elizabeth-town, March 4, 1783. "I have the pleature to inform you, that last night major William Crane, Twelly and six others, went to New-York with a whale boat, boarded and took potfession of a 20 gun ship, being aground under the old battery, and likewise a sloop with 120 puncheons of government spirits, and 12 nine pounders and small sails belonging to the ship; they were so fortunate as not to be discovered until they had got without the reach of the enemy's cannon, and finally succeeded in conducting the sloop, with her cargo and other appurtenances, near the point, where we have been builty employed throughout the day in discharging her of the ipirits, and using every means to lighten her. I am in hopes the sloop will be got off to night. They brought off 20 prisoners, with the captains of the ship and sloop. They were decoyed by being told that it was a boat belonging to the Chatham man of war, who came in fearch of fome of their people; this itratagem was plaufible, as it has been long the practice of the British to board small crast and press the hands; so that on this information they concealed themselves below deck, and rendered her an easy acquisition."

Extraß of a letter from Newbern (North-Carolina) dated February 12, 1783.

dated February 2, 1783...

The only news we have at present is, that we have had several prizes since our entering the capital, and they prove of a very great value. We have had several arrivals from different ports, but I cannot at present be particular. We have this day had an account, that a large transport with 150 invalids, from Jamaica, bound to New-York, having been out six weeks, appeared off our bar, greatly diffressed, having sprung a leak and in great want of provisions; several of the officers are now here, and some privateers are gone to bring in the vessel. We have also had an arrival from the Havanna.

"Our assembly is now sitting, and every thing quiet. dated February 2, 1783.

"Our affembly is now fitting, and every thing quiet.
On Tuesday next we chuse our governor. It is said the confication act will be repealed; but should his event take place I dread the fatal consequences that will arise from it."
